Overview

Liam Beville is a Limerick-based powerlifter marking 40 years in elite competition in 2026 - and remains ranked world number one in his age and weight category at 61 years of age. A proud Soda Cake from Thomondgate, every record, title, and ranking has been earned in able-bodied competition, despite living with a permanent disability.

In 1992, his 310 kg deadlift at 75 kg bodyweight equated to 220 Wilks points - the highest Wilks score ever recorded by an Irish lifter in the deadlift. More than three decades later, that benchmark remains unequalled. The belt worn for that historic lift is permanently exhibited in The People's Museum of Limerick.

Athletic Achievements

- Guinness World Record - 285 kg conventional deadlift (MP4 category)
- 310 kg deadlift at 75 kg bodyweight (IPF international competition)
- Six simultaneous world records across four weight divisions
- Multiple 'Best Lifter' awards in able-bodied competition
- Ireland's highest verified Wilks score - 220 points (1992), standing 34 years

Author & Media

Unbroken - The Liam Beville Story is a narrative memoir documenting how a permanently disabled Irish powerlifter competed exclusively in able-bodied sport, set a Guinness World Record, and held six world records across four weight divisions. Liam was also personally shortlisted to the final 100 from over 4,000 applicants for the Irish adaptation of The Traitors, a reality TV series unrelated to the book.
